

Education

Faculty Advisers: TBA

Education is an area of practice and policy that is subject to scholarly inquiry from a variety of disciplinary perspectives. A number of departments (e.g., human development, psychology, public policy, sociology) offer courses relevant to education and teaching. Many education courses can be used to meet undergraduate program requirements in those departments.

Urban Teacher Education Program

The Urban Teacher Education Program (UTEP) for the certification of elementary school teachers (grades K–9) has been developed by the Center for Urban School Improvement and the Graham School of General Studies at the University of Chicago. College students take a three-quarter Foundations of Education sequence (SOSC 25501-25502-25503) in their fourth year and then continue with a fifteen-month graduate program that includes substantial clinical work in local public schools, including the University of Chicago Charter School. A Master of Arts in Teaching is awarded upon successful completion of the program.

Students who are interested in UTEP should consult with their College adviser and with Kavita Kapadia, Urban Teacher Education Program Director (834.1837, kkapadia@uchicago.edu). Typically students apply to the program during their third year and take the foundations sequence in their fourth year. However, other students apply in their fourth year for participation in UTEP after graduation from the College.
