

JOINT BA/MA IN INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Department Website: <http://cir.uchicago.edu>

GENERAL INFORMATION

The Committee on International Relations (CIR) has its origins in a conference on the causes and characteristics of major wars, which was organized in 1926 by University of Chicago political scientists Charles Merriam and Quincy Wright. In 1928, the research papers and collaborations spawned by this conference led to the award of several master's degrees and thereby the establishment of CIR, now the nation's oldest graduate program in international affairs.

Combining rigorous core instruction with an interdisciplinary curriculum, CIR's one-year master's program allows students to explore the complexities of global politics and interact with world-class faculty, scholars, and professionals (<https://cir.uchicago.edu/people/>) across the social sciences and the business, law, and public policy schools. Students develop depth of expertise by specializing in two fields of study and by producing an original MA thesis. A member of the University of Chicago faculty, CIR's senior academic staff, and an assigned preceptor together mentor each student.

CIR also offers an extensive professional development curriculum. In addition to working with CIR's in-house career services team, students access the expertise and funding of the University's Center for International Social Science Research, Institute of Politics, and regional studies centers.

CIR maintains its own professional development fund for self-designed internships in the United States and abroad; for career exploration treks; for MA thesis field work; and for individual and group visits to the University of Chicago's global centers in New Delhi, Beijing, and Hong Kong.
